A $75,000 FUR COAT

Russia in the throes of revolution, anarchy and starvation, has, according to a news item, been searched for skins suitable to make a $75,000 sable coat for the wife of William Ellis Corey, the steel king. The lady's ambition to wear "the costliest fur coat ever worn by a woman" is being gratified. She wanted it in time to outshine all her sisters in the late winter Paris season and the world has been searched to meet this whim.
 The man-world has ever been a prey to vain women. Little do they care for existing conditions. What they want they must have. War has been depended upon to bring many beneficial changes and reforms, and among others most desired was the stopping of extravagances. There can be no begrudging our women the best that can be given them, and more especially the mothers, who have made the great sacrifice—but what $75,000 would do in starving Europe and in homes here made destitute insists upon a hearing in the minds of the thoughtful.
 A more inopportune time for an exhibition of excess it would be hard to find than the present time. There are so many things more desirable today than the costliest fur coat that the wonder is that any one could be found willing to carry such evidence of thoughtlessness into the limelight of publicity.—Boston Post.
